Our Vision

We envision a world where healthy and safe housing is available to all and we are all inspired to work collectively to create self-sustaining communities.
Dear Friends of Red Feather,

When our staff and board met early last year for our annual planning we knew we were facing some difficult decisions. Everyone recognized that operating programs in different regions, Arizona and Montana, was putting too great a strain on our limited resources.

In Arizona we have a contract to weatherize homes and teach workshops that provides leverage to attract other funding and create complementary programs. After having searched unsuccessfully the two previous years for similar financial stability in Montana, we decided the best thing for the organization was to suspend our programs there.

While saddened to have to step away from the Northern Cheyenne people, who have as great a need as ever for healthy housing, we feel confident now that this was the right decision for Red Feather. You will see in this annual report that our Arizona programs have flourished, and our financial situation is healthier. Red Feather was able to help more people working in a single region than when we were spread thinly across two.

We could not have weathered the difficult times and started this new re-growth without the patience, trust and support of all of you. If you are getting this annual report it is because you have cared enough to give us your financial support, donate your time, or have shared some wisdom with us. We can’t thank you all enough. We hope you will read this report and enjoy the fruits of your support as much as we have. And when you’re done reading it, please share this report with your friends, especially any that live in Arizona.

We remain committed to developing programs, expertise and resources that can be shared with other tribes. Your continued support will ensure that we are able to help more communities in the future.

Sincerely,

Education and Homeowner Workshops
The majority of the people we work with are resilient and resourceful. They may need a “hand up” from time to time, but they aren’t looking for a “handout”. Students of Red Feather do-it-yourself workshops come away with not only the knowledge, tools and materials to solve minor home health and safety repairs, but also a greater appreciation for the connection between home maintenance and family health. Classroom education is combined with hands-on practice at student homes to ensure graduates have the confidence to utilize the tools and materials they receive upon successful completion of the course. Current courses include: DIY Home Weatherization, Women’s DIY Home Repair, Aging In-Place Home Assessments and Education, and we are developing a Healthy Heating class to educate homeowners on the health and safety risks associated with heating their homes.

“The hands-on experience was helpful. So thankful for people from Red Feather to come out and show, discuss, how to maintain our home homes. Thank you so much”
- Tuba City Weatherization Workshop Student 11.8.17

“There was nothing I did not like about this course. Everything I learned about weatherizing my home will come in handy for me and my family.” - Hopi Weatherization Workshop Student 11.7.17

“I really liked the hand on technique. I learn best by doing. Guys are all knowledgeable, encouraging, and quite personable. Don’t make me feel like an idiot. LOL. I have a lot more confidence on what I can do or may be able to do. Thanks for the training and tools. Highly recommend!”

Homes Improved and Weatherized

For some of the most vulnerable members of the community, often elders or families with a member who is disabled, we provide oversight for construction projects. This typically includes producing scopes of work, hiring local professionals, coordinating volunteers, ordering materials, and managing the budget. We also weatherize homes through a contract we have with APS to make their limited income customers’ homes more energy efficient. Our weatherization contractor hires local professionals to do the work, which brings new money into their communities. In 2017 our weatherization program employed two full time Hopi professionals.

“We are humbly grateful for everything Red Feather did to help us. I don’t see my breath inside the house anymore. And the kids seem to have a whole new outlook. They are all doing much better in school now.” - Bilford Curly 2016 Home Renovation Recipient

“I like my house now. It’s warm again.” - Jeanette Sahneyah 2017 Home Renovation Recipient

Community and Economic Development

One of the underlying objectives of Red Feather programs throughout our history has been to provide knowledge and resources that empower individuals, families and communities. Empowerment and development enable people to do more than was previously possible. Throughout all our work, we look for opportunities to share what we know, who we know, and anything else that may be of help to the communities we are working in. We refer to this as Community Development. Our investments here are opportunistic. As needs arise, if we are uniquely qualified to help and have the ability to do so, we will.

Similarly, we know that an important aspect to ending the cycle of poverty is improving opportunities for employment. Red Feather has a rich history of training people in the construction trades, and has explored and will continue to be involved in various job trainings for home, health and environmental professionals. Investments we make in workforce training or toward the creation of new jobs we refer to as Economic Development.
Native Home Resource Network (NHRN)

NHRN is a case management program that helps families resolve their own home health and safety risks. Case managers work directly with the families to first prioritize the most urgent housing needs and then determine what resources the family is able to contribute. Next, case managers develop and implement a personalized strategy for securing needed resources, which can include: financial counseling, application assistance for grants or loans, fundraising campaigns, material donations; contractor referrals, and volunteer recruitment to assist with needed home repairs. Armed with these resources most families are able to independently complete their projects.

Our Programs in Action...

“As early as two months ago there were 11 children and grandchildren living in the home for a total of 13 family members in the home. The mother has recently become unemployed in order to better care for the smaller children. With the high cost of raising a family and now with the purchase of school clothes and supplies, vehicle in need of repairs (live 85 miles, one way, from the nearest town to get food and supplies), and in general all the daily needs of family life, have taken their toll both emotionally and financially.” – excerpt from Gomez family letter requesting funding. Red Feather helped raise the money the family needed for materials to replace their own roof.

Fortunately none of the 13 Sherlock family members (1 grandmother, 2 parents, 10 children) were injured when their mobile home’s roof was ripped off and one wall blown down in a severe weather event near the Navajo Chapter of Kayenta. Neighbors, extended family, and members of the community all came together to build the family a new home. Red Feather was able to help get some of the materials for the project donated.
